Description

A mid-century terracotta ewer, so beautifully weathered it looks far more ancient than it really is. circa 1940.

"Mid-century" refers to the period roughly between the 1940s and 1960s, characterised by distinct design and cultural trends. In architecture and furniture, it emphasises clean lines, functional forms, and integration with nature. This era, marked by post-war optimism, significantly influenced modern aesthetics, reflecting both innovation and simplicity.
