Description

A brass wine decanting cradle circa 1950. Perfect for the bottle of Petrus you're keeping for a special occasion.

Wine decanting cradles are elegant tools designed to assist in serving aged wines with care. These cradles securely hold the bottle at an angle, minimising movement and preventing sediment from mixing into the wine. Ideal for delicate vintages, they allow precise pouring without disrupting the wine's clarity or flavour profile. Typically crafted from materials like metal or wood, they combine functionality with aesthetic appeal, enhancing the wine-serving ritual for enthusiasts and collectors alike.
