Description

A pair of mid 19th century steel and brass fireside griffins figures, circa 1850.

Fireside Griffins are mythical creatures that combine the majesty of a lion and the wisdom of an eagle, often depicted gathered around cozy hearths in enchanted forests or ancient castles. Unlike their fierce counterparts,

Fireside Griffins are peaceful and social, known for storytelling and guarding sacred knowledge. Their feathers shimmer with warm hues like embers, and their presence brings comfort and protection. They are believed to inspire creativity and courage in those nearby.

Legends say their soft purring crackles like firewood, soothing weary travellers. Fireside Griffins symbolise warmth, kinship, and the magical power of shared stories by the fire.
