

Mid century pressed ruby glass service

£185

Description

A mid century pressed ruby glass service comprising twelve dinner plates, six side plates and a water jug, circa 1950.

Pressed glass is a type of glassware created by moulding molten glass under pressure to form intricate patterns and shapes. Popularised in the 19th century, it features detailed, often symmetrical designs. This technique makes glassware more affordable while retaining artistic quality, commonly used for dishes, bowls, and decorative items.
