Description

A striking mid-century Hollywood Regency table lamp, fashioned as a classical fluted column in warm gilt ormolu and set on a substantial veined marble base. Architectural and sculptural in equal measure, it translates the grandeur of antiquity into the theatrical glamour and polished luxury of the Hollywood Regency period.

The slender, vertically fluted column rises from the cool solidity of the marble, creating a compelling contrast between the lustrous gilt-metal surface and the natural movement of the stone. The result is a lamp with real presence: elegant enough to complement a formal interior, yet bold enough to act as a decorative focal point when unlit.

Its design draws on the enduring language of classical architecture-proportion, symmetry, and fluting-while the rich gilt finish lends a distinctly mid-century sense of drama. This blend of historic reference and cinematic glamour makes it a particularly versatile piece, equally at home among antique furnishings, mid-century modern design, or a more contemporary decorative scheme.

Ideal for a bedside table, console, library desk, mantelpiece, or pair of side tables, the lamp brings height, warmth, and refined luminosity to a room. A handsome and sophisticated decorative accent, it offers the glamour of Hollywood Regency with an enduringly classical silhouette.
