Description

James Levin Henry RA and Member of the New English Art Club (1855-1929) . Oil on board Rooftops, signed J. L. Henry lower right.

James Levin Henry (1855-1929) was a British landscape painter known for his oil and water-colour works. Born in London, he exhibited extensively between 1877 and 1938 at prestigious venues such as the Royal Academy, Royal Institute of Painters in Water Colours, and the New English Art Club, where he became a member in 1887. His paintings often depicted serene rural scenes, including river landscapes and coastal views. Notable works include "Breezy Lowlands," exhibited in 1908.

From the personal collection of Edward Wolfe RA and his partner James (Jim) O'Connor.
