Description

A fine and rare Hukin & Heath Victorian silver plate triform three bottle tantalus with patented locking system circa 1910

Hukin & Heath was a prominent British silversmithing firm established in the mid-19th century, known for producing high-quality silverware and electroplated items. The company gained fame for its innovative and elegant designs, often collaborating with renowned designer Dr. Christopher Dresser, whose modern, functional creations greatly influenced their product line.

Specialising in tableware, tea sets, and decorative items, Hukin & Heath's craftsmanship and innovative approach made them a key player in the decorative arts during the Victorian and Edwardian eras.
