Description

A set of six uranium glass hors d'oeuvres dishes with only a minimal hint of radiation!

Uranium glass is a type of glassware that includes uranium oxide, giving it a distinct yellow-green or vibrant lime colour. When exposed to UV light, it fluoresces with a mesmerising neon green glow, making it highly collectible. Popular in the 19th and early 20th centuries, uranium glass was used in household items like cups, plates, and decorative pieces. Although slightly radioactive, it's generally considered safe and valued today for its unique appearance and historical novelty.
