£995

Description

A pair of 18ct white gold and brilliant cut diamond drop earrings each set with a large Tahitian pearl.

Tahitian pearls, often called "black pearls," are among the most prized gems in the world. Cultivated in the warm lagoons of French Polynesia, they are produced by the black-lipped oyster (Pinctada margaritifera). Unlike traditional white pearls, Tahitian pearls display a natural dark colour with overtones of green, blue, aubergine, and peacock.

Their sizes range from 8mm to over 18mm, often perfectly round or baroque in shape. Renowned for their unique lustre and exotic hues, they symbolise luxury and sophistication. These pearls are used in high-end jewellery, appealing to collectors and fashion enthusiasts alike for their rarity and natural beauty.
