Description

An Art Deco Hukin & Heath silver tea pot with fruitwood handle. Birmingham 1924.

Hukin and Heath were renowned innovators during the 19th and early 20th centuries, celebrated for their contributions to metalwork and design. Based in Birmingham, England, they specialised in creating elegant silverware, tableware, and decorative objects.

Collaborating with artists like Dr. Christopher Dresser, they fused industrial techniques with refined aesthetics, pioneering functional yet stylish designs. Their works often featured clean lines, geometric patterns, and Art Nouveau influences. Today, their creations remain highly collectible, symbolising the height of Victorian craftsmanship and modernity.
